DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

2. Claims 9-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Fink (6,543,806).

Fink teaches a gas generator for an inflatable occupant protection system in a motor vehicle comprising: a gas canister having a pressurized gas stored therein and a rupturable seal at a discharge end; an elongate projectile firing barrel comprising a base end with an opening oriented toward the rupturable seal; a quantity of ignitable propellant positioned in the projectile firing barrel; a projectile positioned in the barrel and movable therein upon ignition of the propellant; wherein upon ignition of the propellant, the projectile is driven into and ruptures the rupturable seal, thereby releasing the pressurized gas for inflation of an airbag, the projectile being retained thereafter between the base end and the discharge end. Fink teaches a body member positioned about the projectile firing barrel, and a connecting member connecting the gas canister and the body member, the connecting member having an inwardly extending wall with a central aperture substantially aligned with the rupturable seal. The barrel is substantially cylindrical; and the base end includes a substantially planar flange positioned opposite the inwardly extending wall, the projectile retained between the wall and the flange after rupturing the seal as shown in the figures. Fink teaches a connecting member attached to the first body and having a central aperture substantially aligned with the rupturable seal; a second substantially cylindrical body attached to the connecting member; a projectile firing barrel positioned in an interior of the second body, the barrel including a flange extending from a base end, and an opening oriented toward the rupturable seal; a projectile movable in an interior of the barrel; a propellant composition located in the barrel and ignitable to drive the projectile; wherein upon propellant activation the projectile is driven through the barrel and into the rupturable seal, thereby liberating the contents of the first body, the projectile being retained thereafter between the flange and the connecting member.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 1-8 are allowed.

Art Unit: 3616

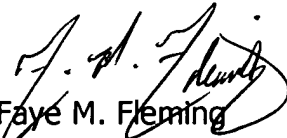

4. Claims 13-16 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
